

Holy man will probe past in SA (South Africa)

A holy man from India, at present a lecture tour of South Africa, will meet African scholars and experts on African culture and folklore in an effort to find positive of an ancient link between the peoples of India and Africa.

Kavi Yogi Maharishi Shuddhananda Bharati, a former university professor turned mystic, told POST this week that there was little doubt that the countinent of Africa was joined with India many thousands of years ago to form the ancient continent of Lemuria.

Continental drift, which is an established geological fact, was responsible for the fact that thousands of miles and vast expanses of water now separate Africa and India.

The Maharishi said that there were many similarities between the ancient cultures of Africa and India. An interesting fact ot which he will pay particular attention in his discussions with African experts is that the Zulus and other African tribes have forms of sun worship. One of the most ancient religious philosophies or Indian deifies the sun.

On his return to India, the Maharishi plans to write a book on his experiences in South Africa, which he described as 'a most beautiful country'.
